

An Excellent Combination.

The pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO., illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative, cleansing the system effectually, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers gently yet promptly and enabling one to overcome habitual constipation permanently. Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative.

In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal qualities of the remedy are obtained from senna and other aromatic plants, by a method known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only. In order to get the beneficial effects and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package.

LIGHTNING ENDED THE TRAGEDY.STICKEN DEAD UPON A NEWLY MADE GRAVE.

The Romantic Tale of an Arapahoe Belle and a Handsome Young Missionary.

LOVED NOT WISELY, BUT TOO WELL.

Wherever human hearts beat in unison, there tragedy lays a forcible hand, sometimes with a grasp that burns and sometimes with a light touch that only tells of what might be the fate of a wild dream but that its counterpart may not be found in life, chronicled in the papers as prosaic news. If the novelist were but to set down the tale of Blanche Brooke, the beautiful Arapahoe belle, and John Forrester, the handsome young minister, leaving the incidents as they are and giving it the color of life so that the characters might seem to live and breathe and so enlist our sympathies, his fame and fortune would be made.

It is a strange tale of two human hearts and a heaven-sent retribution. In a newly made grave lies the girl in whose veins ran just enough of Indian blood to heighten her beauty, a grave of her own closing, and by her side lies the recumbent lover who was stricken by fire from heaven while praying over the last resting place of the sweetheart he had wronged.

Unable to bear the cold suspicion she saw in the faces of her people, she plunged a long dagger into her bosom while her lover read the text for the Sunday morning's service. It was her lover who officiated at her funeral, and a few weeks later it was his lifeless form that was found across the freshly made mound of earth where she lay buried.

A WOMAN OF MANY GRACES.

Blanche Brooke was the daughter of Utaio, a "quarter blood" chief of the Arapahoe tribe in Oklahoma Territory. A sixteenth part Arapahoe, Blanche was the most beautiful for the trace of savage ancestry, which was faintly discernible in her glaucous hair and gloriously black eyes. Her skin was that of a brunette, clear almost to transparency, and her figure was slightly above the medium height and perfect in its symmetry. Not only was Blanche fair to look upon, but she had all the charm of a highly cultivated woman. At the age of 14 she had been sent away to Carlisle, Penn., to the Indian school there. Remaining for five years, and applying herself with diligence to her studies, she graduated with honors as a student. Her accomplishments were many. She returned to her home and her people in the grace of a refined, intelligent and fascinating young womanhood. She was at once the acknowledged Queen of the Arapahoe tribe and belle of the village of Sacred Heart, Okla., where she lived. Now, while the daughter of the Chief was being made wise in the lore of the white man, and growing from a slender young girl of 14 into the beauty of 19, there had come to Sacred Heart a handsome young minister of the gospel. His name was John Forrester. He was 36 years old, and earnestly devoted to ecclesiastical work, bringing to the Indian Agency of the Arapahoes the zeal of a missionary who hoped to devote his life to the saving of souls. With his own hands he built a chapel for worship, neither large nor pretentious, but it sufficed, and, after living two years among them, the minister had won their friendship and confidence.

And then Blanche Brooke came home. It was the most natural thing that could have happened—the love at first sight of the Chief's beautiful daughter and the handsome young minister.

The black eyes of the girl sparkled as

"Mrs. Sanders had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again."

W. A. Sanders, Esq. of Fern, Mason County, W. Va., writes: "My wife had hemorrhages of the lungs, she had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again. She began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and she soon began to gain strength and health. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. If you think this will do you any good to publicize it, please let me know and I will send you a bottle of the medicine. It is a wonderful medicine, and it will cure you."

When anything is wrong with the lungs there is no time to lose. The steps are easy and quick. From a "cough cold" to pneumonia, from pneumonia to permanent lung disease, and from that to death by consumption.

The time to cure consumption is before it gets a start. Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery on the first appearance of cough or cold, and you will never have a hemorrhage or a tubercle. The "Discovery" is the greatest health builder in the world. It first straightens out all digestive disorders, and aids the body in ridding itself of poisonous effluvia.

It tones up the stomach, invigorates the liver and in connection with Dr. Pierce's Kidney Pills keeps the bowels open and regular. Don't let an unscrupulous medicine dealer foist some substitute when you want Dr. Pierce's medicine. Assert your rights—get what you ask for, and be well.

THE WHITE CHAPEL.

The little white painted chapel on the hill became more popular than ever with the people, white-skinned and red-skinned, at Sacred Heart. Blanche Brooke was an ardent worker in church affairs. Her clear, cultivated voice made delightful melody for the congregation, and her supple fingers drew music from the keys of the organ each Sabbath day. Hymns had never before sounded so sweet to the young pastor as day by day their lives became necessary to each other's happiness.

A year passed. The young people met daily, and their admiration for each other began to reveal itself in various little ways. The neighbors and friends gossiped pleasantly about a probable engagement, for it was certainly a most suitable match, and its consummation was doubtless only a question of time. But the predictions of the people did not come true, for no engagement was announced, and still another year rolled by.

Everybody wondered, and whispered their wonder, and sometimes the whispers reached the ears of those most concerned—the principals in this romance which was becoming a terrible reality. Blanche Brooke's black eyes no longer sparkled, and in their depth was a wistful, far-away look. As the months slipped by, this wistfulness deepened into sadness, and the quietude which now marked the girl's every movement was noted by all, so sharply in contrast was it with her former vivacity. The scarlet lips lost their curve and curved into lines of sorrow, white black eyes mirrored the troubled soul, but the voice gave no utterance to that which oppressed her. She came and went like a shadow where sunshine once had been.

Then the people of the community gradually grew impatient. They questioned each other and doubt began to replace their confidence in the integrity of the young minister with the scholarly face and blue-gray eyes. One moonlight night the pastor and the Chief's daughter were passed by a neighbor. They walked slowly and were so engaged in conversation that they did not observe him. He saw that the girl was in an excited mood, and heard her say despairingly: "Then you refuse, because of my Indian blood?"

The interview between the two lovers took place on a Saturday evening. At church the next morning the organ was silent, and the hymns were without the inspiration of Blanche Brooke's voice. She was absent, for the first time three years, from service in the little white chapel on the hill, and at that hour she plunged into her breast the dagger that hurt less than the coldly curious glances of those among whom she once played in innocent, joyous childhood.

THE LAST SCENE.

John Forrester read the burial service of the dead over the beautiful clay. What the torture was to him none will ever know, for the secret is buried with him. His eloquence in eulogy of the dead girl brought tears to the eyes of all. They laid her body to rest in a vacant space back of the chapel, and passers-by related that ever night thereafter the form of a man could be faintly seen there, but it disappeared in the darkness if any one approached. The other night a terrible storm raged over Oklahoma, the little chapel was badly damaged, and the good folks of Sacred Heart pitied those who were abroad on such a night. At daybreak the body of John Forrester was found prostrate upon the grave behind the chapel, killed by a bolt of heaven's lightning and pressed to his pulseless heart was a photograph of Blanche Brooke. His face, in the gray morning light, plainly showed traces of the mental suffering he had undergone since the burial of the girl who had loved him not wisely but too well.

The villagers no longer wondered. The tongue of gossip was silent when John Forrester was lowered to a resting place beside that of beautiful, unhappy Blanche Brooke, for the people knew that his reputation had been poignant and sincere. And they also felt that retribution at the hands of an Unseen Power may sometimes be swift and merciless.

"Now, boys, I have few questions in fractions to ask," said the teacher. Suppose I have a piece of beefsteak and cut it into three pieces, what would those pieces be called?"

"Sixteenths," answered one boy, after meditating a moment.

"Very good. And when the sixteenths were out in half would they be?"

There was silence in the class; but presently a little boy at the foot put up his hand. "Do you know, Johnnie?"

"Hush!"—Answered Johnnie, confidently.

TIME HAS COME TO SELECT STANDARD-BEARERS.

Call for the Meeting Next Saturday, June 17—Also State Convention June 21.

DELEGATE VOTE BY DISTRICTS.

The election this year will be one of unusual importance and it behooves every Democrat to take a hand in selecting the standard-bearer. All cannot go to the State convention at Louisville on June 21, but almost every Democrat can attend the county mass convention at the different county seats next Saturday, June 17. Below will be found the official call, the county call and the delegate vote by districts:

OFFICIAL CALL.

At a meeting held by the Democratic State Executive Committee in the city of Lexington on March 8, 1898, it is ordered that a State Convention be held in the city of Louisville, Wednesday, June 21, 1899, for the purpose of nominating Democratic candidates for State office, to be voted for on November 7, 1899. Said convention will be called to order at 11 o'clock a. m.

Delegates to said State Convention shall be chosen at county mass conventions, to be held at the various county courthouses in counties having but one legislative district, of which due notice shall be given by the various county chairmen. In counties having more than one legislative district there shall be a convention for each legislative district, to be held at some convenient point to be indicated by the chairman of the legislative district committee, who shall advertise in the local papers the location for said convention at least two days prior to the date fixed by said committee. Said county and legislative district convention shall be held at 2 o'clock p. m., standard time, on June 17, 1899. Said convention shall be called to order by the chairman of the respective county or legislative district committee.

The basis of representation of each county to the said State Convention shall be one delegate for each 300 voters, and fraction consisting of 100 or more votes cast for the head of the Democratic ticket at the Presidential election in 1896, provided that each county shall have at least one delegate vote.

All known Democrats and others who supported W. J. Bryan for President, and those who pledge themselves to support the nominees of said convention, shall be entitled to participate in the county or legislative district conventions.
